Moscow's Golden-Pink Sunset Lifts the City's Spirits

May 15, 2020

Moscow residents were treated to a magnificent sunset after Thursday evening's springtime rain that could still be enjoyed from one's window.

The golden-pink sky and rainbow brought a much-needed burst of color into our lives — no filter required.

And while Muscovites are technically restricted from non-essential trips outside, some people just couldn't resist the urge to Instagram the sight from the street.

Here's a look at the view from every angle:

If you squint your eyes, it might feel like you're in Paris.

You couldn't help but feel like you were in an impressionist painting — or maybe that's the feeling of being in self-isolation for too long.
