

Moscow's Museums Welcome Back Visitors With New Exhibitions

July 21, 2020

As Moscow's museums have slowly begun to reopen in the past month, the Russian capital's cultural life has also reawakened with a series of new exhibitions. In addition to requiring masks, most museums require visitors to reserve tickets online for a specific time slot in an effort to keep crowding down and curb the potential spread of the coronavirus. Here's a look at what's going on in Moscow's post-lockdown arts scene:

Visitors enjoy the Pushkin Museum of Fine Art's exhibition of great artists' works, ranging to Dürer to Matisse. Sergei Kiselyov / Moskva News Agency
