

China's Huawei Shifts Investment from U.S. to Russia

Founder says U.S. sanctions have pushed the Chinese telecoms giant closer to Russia.

September 01, 2020

Russia has criticized the U.S. for placing sanctions on Huawei. Marius Becker / dpa / TASS

Huawei increased its investment in Russia after the U.S. slapped the Chinese telecoms giant with sanctions last year, Huawei founder Ren Zhengfei said.

“After the United States included us in the Entity List, we transferred our investment in the U.S. to Russia, increased Russian investment, expanded the Russian team of scientists and increased the salary of Russian scientists,” Hong Kong-based newspaper South China Morning Post cited Zhengfei as having said on a tour of Chinese universities last month.

The “Entity List” contains more than 100 Chinese companies the Donald Trump administration has deemed a threat to U.S. national security. It is the same list that the U.S. used to introduce sanctions on Russian firms following the annexation of Crimea.

Related article: Russia's MTS Signs 5G Deal With Chinese Telecom Giant Huawei, Reports Say

The Huawei designation came amid the escalating trade war between the world's two largest economies. The U.S. strengthened the sanctions this August to block companies selling Huawei any computer chips which have been developed or produced using U.S. technology.

Russia has been significantly more welcoming to the Chinese tech giant, which is the world's largest producer of telecommunication equipment and one of the few companies with the capacity to roll-out 5G technology. Huawei is actively involved in developing Russia's 5G infrastructure and Russian President Vladimir Putin has strongly criticized the U.S. sanctions.

Huawei employs around 800–900 staff in Russia, business daily Vedomosti reported, up a third from last year. It has four research and development (R&D) centres in Russia and plans to hire 1,000 more R&D staff by 2024.

Original url:

<https://www.themoscowtimes.com/2020/09/01/chinas-huawei-shifts-investment-from-us-russia-a7130>