The Moscow Times
30 YEARS
INDEPENDENT NEWS FROM RUSSIA

Muscovites Talk About Coronavirus, Moscow's QR Code System

By Sonia Kopelev and Samantha Berkhead

November 03, 2020

As the second wave of the record-breaking coronavirus pandemic tears through Russia, the government has reinstated a national mask mandate as well as a decree requiring establishments to close between 11 pm and 6 am.

Moscow, however, has kept its nightlife going past 11 pm, requiring Muscovites only to register their phone number with a QR code for contact tracing.

We spoke to some local bartenders in Moscow, as well as the head doctor of a clinic here, to see how Muscovites really feel about these measures against the coronavirus.

Original url:
https://www.themoscowtimes.com/2020/11/03/muscovites-talk-about-coronavirus-moscows-qr-code-system-a71944