The Moscow Times
30 YEARS
INDEPENDENT NEWS FROM RUSSIA

Russia 'Concerned' Over Myanmar Civilian Casualties

By AFP

March 29, 2021

More than 100 people including children were killed by security forces in Myanmar on Saturday in the deadliest weekend since February's military coup. AP / TASS

Russia acknowledged Monday that it was developing ties with Myanmar but said it was "very concerned" by an increase in civilian casualties at protests against military rule.

More than 100 people including children were killed by security forces in Myanmar on Saturday in the deadliest weekend since February's military coup.

Related article: Russia to Deepen Ties With Myanmar Military Junta, Top Defense Official Says in First Visit After Coup

Kremlin spokesman Dmitry Peskov told reporters that Russia has long-standing and "constructive" ties with Myanmar.

"This absolutely does not mean that we approve of the tragic events taking place in the country," Peskov said.

"We are very concerned by the growing number of civilian casualties."

At least 107 people were killed in last weekend's bloodshed in Myanmar as the regime staged a major show of might for Armed Forces Day.

Russian Deputy Defense Minister Alexander Fomin and other officials joined the annual parade showcasing Myanmar's military prowess.

In a statement released by the ministry, Fomin said that Myanmar was Russia's "reliable ally and strategic partner" in Southeast Asia.

The Defense Ministry statement added that Moscow wanted to deepen "military and military-technical cooperation in the spirit of strategic partnership."

At the parade Russia showcased its equipment including T-72 tanks, MiG-29 fighter jets and Mi-24 helicopters.

Original url:
https://www.themoscowtimes.com/2021/03/29/russia-concerned-over-myanmar-civilian-casualties-a73402