

Former U.S. Marine Ends Hunger Strike in Russian Prison

By AFP

November 17, 2021

Former US marine and University of North Texas student Trevor Reed. Moscow City Court / TASS

A former U.S. Marine serving a nine-year prison term in Russia ended a hunger strike he launched to protest against alleged violations of his rights, his lawyer told AFP Wednesday.

U.S. citizen Trevor Reed is serving his sentence in a penal colony some 500 kilometers southeast of Moscow after being convicted of assaulting police officers while drunk in 2019.

Related article: U.S. Ex-Marine Reed Goes on Hunger Strike in Russian Prison – Reports

His lawyer Sergei Nikitenkov said Reed "ended the hunger strike" after being released from an isolation cell where he was placed for allegedly breaking prison rules.

Reed announced a hunger strike on Nov. 4 saying he had been repeatedly placed in the isolation cell but denied any wrongdoing.

According to Nikitenkov, he is now receiving medical treatment.

Original url:

<https://www.themoscowtimes.com/2021/11/17/former-us-marine-ends-hunger-strike-in-russian-prison-a75590>