

Rich Nations to Tap 120 Mn Barrels From Emergency Oil Reserves: IEA

By AFP

April 06, 2022

Rich nations release oil from emergency reserves. EPA

Rich countries will tap an additional 120 million barrels of oil from emergency reserves in a bid to calm crude prices that have soared following Russia's invasion of Ukraine, the International Energy Agency said on Wednesday.

The move includes 60 million barrels to be released by the United States, which has recently announced it would tap its strategic oil reserves.

The IEA "is moving ahead with a collective oil stock release of 120 million barrels (including 60 million barrels contributed by the U.S. as part of its overall draw from its Strategic Petroleum Reserve)", IEA executive director Fatih Birol said in a tweet.

Related article: China Calls on U.S to Lift Russia Sanctions to Resolve Ukraine Invasion

Last week, U.S. President Joe Biden announced a record release of U.S. oil onto the market -- one million barrels every day for six months, or a total of more than 180 million barrels.

The 30 other members of the IEA agreed on Friday at an extraordinary ministerial meeting of the 31-nation IEA to tap their emergency oil reserves again but did not disclose by how much.

The IEA members -- which include the United States, European countries, Australia and Japan, among others -- had already pledged last month to release 62.7 million barrels of oil.

Its members hold emergency stockpiles totalling 1.5 billion barrels.

On March 7, oil prices flirted with historic highs last seen during the 2008 financial crisis. North Sea Brent crude closed at $139.13 a barrel and West Texas Intermediate hit $130.50.

Prices have since retreated but were still hovering at around $100 a barrel on Wednesday.

Original url:

https://www.themoscowtimes.com/2022/04/06/rich-nations-to-tap-120-mn-barrels-from-emergency-oil-reserves-iea-a77250