Artist Sends Russian Justice Ministry an Illustrated Letter About Ukraine War

Daria Apakhonchich's quarterly report was not what the ministry expected.

April 21, 2022

The artist Daria Apakhonchich, who was declared a "foreign agent" in 2020, sent a decidedly non-standard quarterly report to the Russian Justice Ministry. On her Facebook page she explained that every three months she is required by law to send a report on her activities, including details of her income, to the ministry. Since the war began she hadn't sent in a report, so she decided to send illustrations about what was happening in Ukraine in lieu of a traditional accounting. She hoped that her letter would be read by someone in the ministry who was still "a living human being."
