Updated to add Roizman's sentencing.

Russian opposition politician and former Yekaterinburg Mayor Yevgeny Roizman has been jailed over a social media post in support of jailed Kremlin critic Alexei Navalny, the local media outlet It's My City reported Thursday.

Roizman was accused of posting a video clip that briefly showed the logo of Navalny's Anti-Corruption Foundation, which was outlawed as an "extremist" organization in 2021, on social media platform VKontakte last February, according to police.

A court in Yekaterinburg sentenced Roizman to 14 days of administrative arrest after finding him guilty on charges of sharing symbols related to an "extremist" organization, It's My City reported.

His lawyer Vladislav Idamzhapov said his client hadn't shared the video and that the Vkontakte page in question did not belong to him.

"We immediately state that Yevgeny Roizman did not take part in this offense, as he never had a personal account on VKontakte and never used this social media," Idamzhapov told the state-run TASS news agency ahead of the trial.

"I do not admit that the event even took place, let alone my guilt," Roizman said on his way to the court.
