Moscow has invested heavily in the Northern Sea Route as the Arctic warms disproportionately faster than the rest of the world and opens the strategic shipping route connecting Europe and Asia to year-round navigation.

The route runs from the Arctic city of Murmansk in northwestern Russia to the Bering Strait in Russia's Far East.

President Vladimir Putin has ordered to boost annual shipments through the Northern Sea Route to 80 million metric tons by 2024.

In September, energy giant Gazprom said it made its first liquefied natural gas (LNG) deliveries to China via the route.

Private group Novatek, Russia's number two natural gas producer after Gazprom, used the same route to deliver LNG to China in 2018.

Kaliningrad, which is wedged between EU members Poland and Lithuania, has been hit by EU limits on the volume of transit goods as part of sanctions in response to Russia's invasion of Ukraine.
