

Pastor Defends Viral 'Russia for Christ' Video Praising Ballistic Missiles

November 21, 2023

Service of the evangelical church "Mission Light of Christ". Video grab

A video of an evangelical church service in St. Petersburg featuring songs about ballistic missiles and the chorus "Russia for Christ" went viral over the weekend, prompting Pastor Olga Golikova of the Light of Christ Mission Church to respond this Sunday.

The video, published in March, featured Golikova speaking over background singers and music while people walked in circles carrying Russian and Israeli flags, flags with the slogan "Russia for Christ" and others that appeared to show military hardware and mushroom clouds.

"We take, Lord, this runway, we rise into the sky with your ballistic missiles. We rise there, Lord, with supersonic planes to carry the good news that Russia is for Christ!" says Golikova in the video.

Many evangelical Christians believe that as evil grows in the world, the end times grow nearer, and with that, with variations on the details, believers will ascend to Heaven and Christ will return to rule the Earth.

Influential American Evangelical Pat Robertson said in March 2022 that Russian President Vladimir Putin was “compelled by God” to invade Ukraine to fulfill this prophecy of armageddon.

The Light of Christ Church was founded by an American evangelist in 1993. Golikova has an English-language YouTube channel in addition to a Russian one with 113,000 subscribers.

In her sermon this Sunday, Golikova thanked people outside of her church for the attention the video received. She explained that many years ago God had put the phrase “Russia for Christ” in her heart.

She added that God has a “special purpose” for Russia, adding: “All countries that might think of our country as some kind of monster. For these countries, Russia will become a huge blessing.”
