Russian and Ukrainian delegates have begun their second and final day of discussions in Abu Dhabi as part of the Trump administration's renewed push to mediate a deal that would bring an end to Russia's full-scale war against Ukraine.

State media reported on Wednesday morning that negotiation teams from the two warring countries, alongside White House envoys Steve Witkoff and Jared Kushner, had once again sat down to discuss how to put a stop to the fighting.

On Tuesday, Kushner, U.S. President Donald Trump's son-in-law, described the first day of the latest round of peace talks as "constructive."

"We are working to end this devastating war and establish the security arrangements necessary for a sovereign, secure and prosperous Ukraine and lasting peace across Europe," Kushner wrote in a post on X.

This is a developing story. Please come back later for more details.
